The British Education Centre and University of Kent launch “Studying and Living in the UK”, Cultural Orientation Course.

As part of its collaboration with the University of Kent, The British Education Centre has announced the launch of a ‘UK Study Cultural Orientation Course’. The course, designed and delivered by the University of Kent, will help students who are going to study in the UK, be they going for undergraduate, postgraduate or professional studies.

The 5 day course will familiarise students with study and life in the UK. The advantage for students will be that they can reach the UK well prepared for academic and social life in that country, hence providing them with an advantage from the time they arrive.

Speaking about the course and the tie up with University of Kent, the Centre’s Founder and Managing Director Satpaul Dass OBE said “British Universities have expressed their concern that many students arrive in UK inadequately prepared for the change of study methods and life in the UK, and so do not get the best out of their time at college. I am delighted to be partnering with the University of Kent in delivering this course across India. Their international experience and familiarity with India have made them ideal partners for us.”

Dr Anthony Manning, Dean for Internationalisation, University of Kent, said: “Indian students are among our top performers, but we do understand that many face challenges on arriving in an entirely new academic and social context. We are therefore delighted to be collaborating with the British Education Centre to give young Indians students coming to the UK an opportunity to get off to a flying start on arrival and do even better in the long run, wherever they may be studying.”

The first course will run from 23rd to 27th May, 2016 at the British Education Centre, Ground Floor, Building 8A, DLF Cyber City, Gurgaon. Courses will also run in Mumbai, Bangalore and Chennai.
